This instant noodle soup sits in a sturdy bamboo cup with the FSC label. The cup is resealable and also compostable. For the coating of the cup, polylactic acid, a natural cornstarch coating is used, not plastic.

The soup has been developed in Thailand by ONOFF SPICES.

ONOFF SPICES manufactures natural and organic ready-made Thai soups, curry pastes and wok sauces for European gourmets. The production is sustainable with an eye for nature, as well as social with attention to the working conditions and income of the farmers in Isaan, northeastern Thailand who grow peppers, lime leaves, garlic and coriander for the company. These agricultural products do not contain artificial growth or pesticides. ONOFF SPICES makes no concessions to the taste, which is truly Thai and really tasty. All soups, curries and wok sauces are composed in such a way that everyone at home can make a Thai dish in no time.

According to the World Instant Noodles Association, around 280 million portions of instant noodles are eaten every day worldwide. Eighty percent of these are eaten in Asian countries. In Thailand, they are sold on the streets with meat, vegetables or shrimp. In supermarkets, there are rows full of instant noodles. The fact that the new step towards a nutritious, organic instant noodle soup comes from Thailand does not come as a surprise.
